

GEOFFREY SAVAGE

Following university, Geoffrey joined the Civil Service as an Inspector of Taxes. His first posting was to the Soho office where the professions to be assessed to tax were something of an eye-opener for a young man. After ten years, he moved to the private sector as a tax adviser to large companies. A brief period with an insurance company convinced him that there were more honest ways to part the public from its money and he spent most of his career working for brewers.

Now retired, Geoffrey has time to indulge his weaknesses for crosswords, bookshops, beer, and lunch and travelling with his wife.

He became a member of the Club in 2011, having been an occasional guest at Club functions over a number of years.
