

Union – Horse with Two Discs

By Christopher Le Brun 2001. The horse reminiscent of Roman sculpture echoes London's early history and the discs represent the sun and the moon

Museum of London

The Museum of London opened in 1976 as an amalgamation of the London Museum (1911) housed in Kensington Palace and the Guildhall Museum (1826). It traces the 2,000 year history of London through exhibits, models, interactive features and many old shopfronts.

This is the end of your Walk Around the Ward of Cripplegate (with a little help from those of Aldersgate, Bassishaw and Colman Street). I hope you have enjoyed it as an introduction to the historic City of London and will be inspired to come back and explore the City some more.
